Healing Mother Daughter-Relationships with Astrology by Maritha Pottenger and Zip Dobyns
£16.99 plus postage

I found this book interesting and informative on a subject close to my heart. This is a thorough 'cookbook' which combines sound psychological advice with chart analysis and convincing case histories. It sets out a clear system for beginners to identify 12 areas of potential difficulties or support in the mother/daughter relationship, related to the 12 signs and their planetary rulers. The case histories demonstrate the links between up to four generations of families through the female line, showing up repeating patterns. Identifying issues being carried forward from the ancestors can aid in the process of forgiveness and moving on, even when the family members are no longer alive. I would recommend this book to anyone needing to work on difficult mother issues and also in understanding what may be going on in mother substitute relationships, such as with therapists, or other positive role models. Reviewed by Jennifer Lodge.

Astrological Crosses in Relationships
by Pauline Edward
£12.99 plus postage

This really is an absolute gem of a book. The qualities of the signs are often dealt with in a very perfunctory manner as part of another subject; here the author gives due attention to each one and in great depth. She has written with beginners in mind, so the many case histories are kept simple as is the astrological jargon, but the end result is an accessible and thought provoking work suitable for all levels of astrologer. The first three (big) chapters cover the cardinal, fixed and mutable characteristics, with encouragement to look further than just the obvious focus of planets in one quality. The book finishes with sections on life experience, star crossed relationships, and mending broken crosses, which all help to put the knowledge to some practical use. An excellent read, and highly recommended.

Buddhist Astrology
by Jhampa Shaneman and Jan V. Angel
£16.99 plus postage

An interesting work that introduces Buddhist teaching then relates it to astrology in the context of those beliefs; it bridges familiar astrological thinking with the ideas of voidness, interdependence and impermanence. The first part of the book shows how this works in practice with an in-depth delineation of Siddhartha's chart. The rest is more of a cookbook approach bringing Buddhist principles into an everyday understanding of the planets, signs, aspects and houses. An inspirational book for those drawn to an exploration of this faith and its connection with astrology.
